

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method provides to the attendant at a public safety answering point information relating to the location of a telephone which is the source of a call to an emergency number in one or more campuses served by one or more private business exchanges (PBXs). The PBX(s) produce information relating to the source and destination numbers of each call. The destination number is applied to a database to identify emergency calls, and the source number is applied to a second database to identify its location.
